

But he couldn't catch as many fish as Ben until he started to follow the same rule. He realized that not every fish is meant to be eaten.

Ben smiled and said, "It's not just about catching fish. It's about following Yah's commandments and doing what's right."

And so, Ben, the obedient fisherman, continued his daily trips to the sea. He followed Yah's commandment faithfully, and he was blessed with abundance for his obedience.

The Lesson of Obedience

The Obedient Fisherman

In a cozy seaside village, there lived a fisherman named Ben. Each day, Ben set sail to catch fish for his family. Ben was known for obeying Yah's commandment about only eating fish with fins and scales.

Yah's rule said that only fish with fins and scales were good to eat. Ben always remembered this rule and followed it carefully.

When he caught fish without fins and scales, he threw them back into the sea.

Other fishermen wondered why Ben was so careful. They caught many fish, but Ben caught even more. One day, another fisherman asked Ben, "Why do you throw some fish back?"

Ben explained, "I follow Yah's command. Only certain fish are good to eat, the fish must have fins and scales, any other marine animals that do not have fins and scales are an abomination to us, these animals are not food, and we must not touch their dead bodies because if we touch we will be unclean until the evening, as written in the Torah, in Leviticus eleven".

The fisherman listened closely, but he didn't understand. He decided to try Ben's way.
